ARTIST SKETCHES HISTORIC SHRINES OF NEVADA CITY

Ned Hillon Completes Series of Drawings for Exhibition at National Capital

Ned Hilton, on the staff of the Public Works Art Projects, composed of several hundred artists, has completed his first sketches of Nevada City's historic buildings and structures and has forwarded them to Washington, D. C., where an national exhibition of these artists will be held. Sketches in and about Nevada City have been specially requested. One of his sketches, of the Queen Lil mill, is now on exhibition in the show window of the Nevada City Nugget.

Sketches forwarded to Washington include: colored drawing of Sam Kee's laundry on Commercial street; the oldest house in Nevada City, the Lester property on Spring street; interior of the Queen Lil mill; an old store building on Deer Creek; the ruins of a tone office building formerly used by the Champion mine management; the assay office of E. J. N. Ott, and the adjoing building occupied by Dr. W. P. Sawyer; and the headframe of the Providence mine.

AUTHOR HONORS MRS. DOUGLASS

C. B. Glasscock, author of several volumes on historic and scenic California, has just completed "A Golden Highway." To Mrs. Belle Douglass, who guided Mr. Glasscock and Mrs. Glasscock to the various points of interest in this vicinity, when he was preparing to write the last volume, he has sent an autographed copy.

The message inscribed in the book reads:

"To Mrs. Belle Douglass, who contributed so generously to the pleasure of the pilgrimage and so materially to the content of this record, the author and his traveling companion give their thanks and express hope for another meeting.

(Signed),
C. B. GLASSCOCK."

"The Golden Highway," describes the road, and the objects of picturesque and historic interest along it, that threads together the towns of the Mother Lode. Owing partly, no doubt, to invaluable information received from Mrs. Douglass, Nevada county and Nevada City are given generous space in the volume. The book is well worth the reading by all those who have a deep interest in their own community.

Mr. Glasscock is a cousin of Mrs. Raglan Tuttle. Among other volumes he has written are: "Gold in Them Thar Hills" and "Big Bonanza."

Of the road from Nevada City to Yuba Pass, the author says:

"I have motored through the hills of Italy, the Alps of Switzerland, the Adirondacks, besides the Gulf Salerno, and below the hills of Maibu, and the mesas of the Southwest, and across the pastel deserts, and never have I seen a way more beautiful than this winding golden highway from Nevada City into the Yuba Pass and the high Sierras."

U. C. GEOLOGY CLASS MAPS NEV. CITY DIST.

Howell Williams, instructor in Department of Geological Science, at the University of California, has a class of 21 students in the Nevada City-Grass Valley area making maps of the local district.

The young men are staying at the National hotel and each morning they depart for study in the nearby districts.

SUTTER BUTTES VISITED

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Addington with three Boy Scouts motored to Sutter City Sunday. After a short visit with Mr. Addington's father, they motored to the Sutter Buttes.

They visited the oil wells, climbed to the top of the South Butte and gathered many wild flowers.

The Scouts making the trip were: Bob Small, Max Bandy and John Bremer.

MOTHER OF NEVADA CITY RESIDENT DEAD

Word has just been received in this city of the sudden death of Mrs. Brookner, mother of Mrs. Ira Andrews, in Arizona, yesterday.

Mrs. Andrews went to Arizona a week ago to be at the bedside of her mother.

Mrs. Brookner visited her daughter in Nevada City about three years ago and made many friends who will regret to learn of her passing.

In February Mr. and Mrs. Brookner celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Brookner leaves to mourn her passing her husband and two daughters.

STREETS OF NEV. CITY ON HIGHWAY TO BE IMPROVED

Director Earl Lee Kelly of the Department of Public Works has approved and signed an agreement submitted by the City Council of Nevada City and forwarded through Mayor R. J. Bennetts, providing for the maintenance of State highway routes within the city limits, to be financed from the city's share of the one-quarter cent gas tax allocation.

The cost of the work, which is to be done entirely by the State, is estimated at $2,100, which is approximately the amount accruing to the city from the gas tax during the current biennium.

The work embraced in the agreement includes the maintenance of the streets comprising the State highway routes within the city, until June 30, 1935, as follows:

Route 15—York street, from the junction of Routes 17 and 25 at Braoad and York streets, to Washington street; Washington sreet from York street to Nevada street; Nevada street from Washington street to the northerly city limits, a length of approximately 0.65 mile.

Route 17—Zion street from southerly limits to Sacramento street;—Sacramento street from Zion street to Pine street; Pine street from Sacramento street to Broad street; and Broad street from Pine street to York street, a length of approximately 0.75 mile.

Route 25—Broad street from the junction of Route 15, 17 and 25 at York and Broad streets to Downieville highway, Downieville highway from Broad street to Monroe street; Monroe street from Downieville hiway to the westerly city limits, a length of approximately 0.56 mile.

The cost of maintenance of Route 15 is estimated at $400; Route 17 at $900, and Route 25 at $800.

It is agreed that any funds accruing to the city from the gas tax moneys after deduction of the above costs shall accumulate to the credit of the city for expenditure at a later date.

Hundreds Worship In Easter Morn Service At Airport Plateau

Between 450 and 500 people ascended Cement Hill to celebrate the sunrise Easter Service at the airport yesterday morning. One hundred and twenty-five automobiles brought a large proportion of the worshipers and many others rose early and made the journey on foot.

The great log cross, shining in it's oat of aluminum paint, was the focal point of the gathering. The cross was constructed and painted by Arthur Dow, aided by Boy Scouts. The Pacific Gas and Electric company's crew generously assisted the city's workmen in lifting this great cross into place. The cross stands 42 feet high and the spread of it's arms is twelve feet.

MUSIC AND DEVOTIONS

The devotional program, as published in Friday morning's issue of the Nevada City Nugget, was rendered. The high school band of 32 pieces played several selections. Mayor Bennetts delivered a brief address. Mrs. Lyda Talbot sang "Hosanus," and the Rev. H. H. Buckner preached an Easter Sermon.

Following the services, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Perette with Jack Wolff, of Grass Valley, affected a graceful landing on the new runway.

The Boy Scouts played their part in building signal fires along the route and in directing traffc along the newly completed road to the top of Cement Hill.

NOT A DEDICATION

Some of those who came away from the beautiful service seemed to have the impression that it constituted a dedication of the airport. This is not the case for the Chamber of Commerce have already set the tentative date for the dedication on July 4. By that time the airport will be fully completed and, it is expected that a large number of planes will land there, several of state's notable men will be invited to speak, and all of Northern California will be invited to be present on Nevada City's great day.

HUSSEY SHAFT IS STILL IN ORE

The sinking program at the Hussey mine is going ahead rapidly, the bottom of the shaft now being about 65 feet below the working level. As had been anticipated by the management, the bottom of the shaft is still in ore, showing no decrease in the strength or grade from that on the level above. Progress is being made at the rate of over three feet a day, and within a short time, sufficient depth will have been attained to cut a station for a new working level. By placing the entire mine on a three shift basis, it has been possible to sink the shaft without interfering materially with the stoping operations above the present working level. And it is expected that with the opening up of a new working level, ore production can be materially increased.

At the Canada Hill mine, the drift to the North on the Canada Hill vein at the No. 19 level, is making progress at the rate of six feet a day. Two shifts are employed.

Ore from the above properties is treated at the Queen Lil mill, one mile West of Nevada City, which also handles custom milling. From the demand for this class of work, it is evident that there is a healthy amount of activity among the smaller properties of the district as well as in nearby counties, a recent lot having been brought in by trucks from Butte county.

TRANSIENTS IN STATE COST U. S. $3000,000 PER MO.

LOS ANGELES, April 2,—Relieving city, county, and state authorities of an equivalent cost, approximately $300,000 a month is being spent by the federal government in California to take care of the thousands of indigent transients who have become stranded in the state, it was revealed today in a report of H. A. R. Carleton, director of the Federal Transient Service in California, to R. C. Branion State Emergency Relief Administrator.

A total of 41,000 itinerants have registered for aid at government relief bureaus of the state since a nation-wide drive to enroll transients was launched at the beginning of the year, the report showed. These persons, while entitled to care as American citizens, could obtain little help from local authorities because all relief funds were needed to care for permanent residents requiring public and private aid.

Recent government estimates have placed the transient population of California at twelve per cent of the total for the nation, indicating that this state was faced with the most severe problem of any in the country, prior to the establishment of the Federal Transient program.

In addition to relieving local agen-residents, the Transient Service in cities of the burden of care for non-California has helped to reduce materially the court costs and police expenses resulting from vagrancy and misdemeanor cases in which itinerants formerly were involved, the report revealed.

Transient men and boys have been assigned to work camps and shelters, and girls, women, and itinerant families are under the care of special government bureaus and agencies set up for the purpose, according to Carleton, who reported that a rehabilitation program which will aid in re-establishing thousands of homeless wanderers in normal life is also being worked out.

IDAHO MARYLAND MINE STARTS CYANIDE PLANT

The huge cyanide plant that has been under construction for sometime at the Idaho-Maryland mine, started operations last week, working the concentrates from the Idaho-Maryland mine. Company officials are well satisfied with the results being obtained. These concentrates were formerly shipped to the smelter at Selby, for processing.

The men who have been constructing the plant were immediately put to work in the cyanide plant.

The tailings plant is practically complete and it will start working the immense storage of tailings about April 15.

The cutting of stations, ore pockest and preliminary work in the two Brunswick shafts are practically completed. It is expected that within a short time mining and development work will be started in this rich old property.

KEYSTONE DIVIDE TO EQUIP ELECTRICALLY

The work of sinking the new three compartment shaft at the Keystone Divide Mining company property, west of Grass Valley, is making satisfactory progress.

A recent survey was completed for a power line of two and a half miles, which will bring a 500 h. p. current to the property and all machinery is to be electrically equipped.

J. J. Jordan, veteran mining man of the Tonopah and Goldfield mining districts, is superintendent. The recently constructed surface works bear testimony of his craftsmanship.

ODDIE TO PLEAD IN CAPITOL FOR MINE LOAN FUND

In the interest of the gold mining industry, of the United States, Tasker L. Oddie, former United States senator, from Nevada, and president of the Gold Mining Association of America, is going to Washington to present the affairs of the industry. After several days at the Association's headquarters in San Francisco, Senator Oddie completed plans for handling the affairs of the Association in Washington, including the campaign for securing $100,000,000 in Federal Loans for mining.

A number of matters of great importance to the industry are pending and it has become necessary to have the head of the Association present at the National Capital.

On his way to Washington, Senator Oddie will represent the Association at the meeting of the Colorado mining men ,at Denver, on April 2. At this meeting the matter of Federal Loans will be taken up.

Before leaving for the east, Senator Oddie said: "Many meritorious precious metal mining properties in our country, which warrant development, are closed down because of the inability of their owners to finance them. As an emergency measure, and in the interest of increasing gold and silver production, relieving unemployment, purchasing supplies, machinery, construction materials, fuel and power required in mining operations, the Government should advance funds for this development to be repaid from the production of the properties."

REELECTED TRUSTEE

CAMPTONVILLE, April 2.—Fred J. Joubert, was re-elected Trustee, of the Camptonville Union School District, at a quiet school election held Friday afternoon at the Masonic hall. Mr. Joubert has filled this office for many years, and has given much of his time for the benefit of the local schools.

BLUE POINT IN PAYING GRAVEL

The Blue Point Gravel Mining company, near Smartsville, have a crew of 25 employed, working three shifts.

The company is doing development work and it is also running a drift for a drainage tunnel. In the drainage tunnel, good pay gravel has been encountered. All gravel being mined in drifting and development is being sluiced and good values are recovered.

Milton Paine is manager and Mr. Sundeen is superintendent. The Tintic Stadard Gold Mining company, of Utah, has the property under lease and bond.

PLACER MINERS TO PLAN BATTLE

Following the notification served by the Pacific Gas and Electric company on all those engaged in placer mining along the Bear river to cease muddying the water, which the company delivers to Newcastle and a number of small towns below, the owners of placer mining properties conferred and have called a meeting to be held Wednesday night, April 4, in the National hotel, at which a plan of action will be outlined.

Miss Minnie Brand returned today from a visit with relatives in Sacramento and attending the opera.

TEN MILLIONS ARE ASKED FOR STATE RELIEF FOR 2 MO.

Branion Hopes to Put Men at Work on Approved Projects by April 16

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—The preliminry stages of the Federal Governments' Work Relief Program, whereby it is hoped to continue wage employment to qualified unemployed needy persons and to relieve rural unemployed distress, is scheduled to get under way today. Under the authority of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the industrial phases of the program at first will be concentrated in four counties, San Francisco, Alameda, Los Angeles, and San Diego, with more counties being added as surveys and projects are approved.

It is hoped to put the first workers on approved projects by April 16, according to R. C. Branion, State Emergency Relief Administrator, who will be in charge of the program. This date is purely tentative, however, as actual employment must await the proper development of employment opportunities as offered by the suggested projects.

Branion announced that he had applied to Washington for ten million dollars as an all inclusive appropriation for the direct relief and work programs for April and May. The amount will be equally divided between the two months and will include all payrolls and other claims in connection with the Work Program, the continuation of the present educational and other special projects, and direct relief as well.

Branion also announced the appointment of Frank Y. McLaughlin, of Los Angeles, as State Director of the Work Division Placement Service of the new Work Program.

SUNDAY MARKED BY CAR CRASHES

The past week end proved a busy one for Captain Joe Blake and his force of traffic officers.

The following accidents were reported:

Ken Howard, while driving from Grass Valley toward Marysville, crashed into two big oak trees. He is in the Jones Memorial hospital with a fractured skull and complains of his back. The car was wrecked.

Rudolph Wurm, while comng down the Tahoe Ukiah highway yesterday afternoon, alleged under the influence of liquor, ran into a Mr. Peterson, damaging the Peterson car. No arrest was made as Peterson refused to swear out a warrant after Wurm agreed to pay for damage to the car.

A young mn named Meservey, of Nevada City, whose initials or name the officers did not secure, it is reported, ran into Miss Alice Thomas, of Grass Valley last evening. Her nose was broken, several lower teeth knocked out. She was cut and bruised and is now in the Jones hospital.

Miss Thomas' father is of the firm of Thomas and Jensen, of Grass Valley.

Frank Ward, of Smartsville, who was driving an old model "T" Ford, must have lost control of his car while going down hill, and turned over. He suffered a deep cut on the forehead, three or four inches long, and contusions of the body. He is in the county hospital. The car was wrecked.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION MEETS IN GRASS VALLEY

The Placer-Nevada Ministerial Association, members and wives with a lay representative from each of the churches of Nevada and Placer counties, are gathered at the Methodist church, in Grass Valley, today.

The day will be devoted to business matters and the reading of a clerical paper. Dr. A. C. Bane, of Colfax, will preside.

Mrs. H. H. Buckner, of Nevada City, and Mrs. A. L. Pratt, of Grass Valley, wives of the Methodist clergymen of the two cities, entertained about 30 at a luncheon.

Plutarch Given Honor as First Biographer

The word biographia (biography) is first found in the works of a Greek writer named Damascius, who lived 25 centuries ago, but the stories go back further even than he, for they occur in the myths of nations so old they are almost forgotten, stories of popular heroes such as Hercules, often exaggerated, yet in most cases with at least a grain of truth in them.

Xenophon, the famous Greek general who marched for long months through hostile countries, with a little army of hard-bitten warriors, was one of the first to write a real life story. It was that of his master, the great philosopher, Socrates. The first real biographer was Plutarch, who lived in the First century of the Christian era and who wrote the lives of 46 Greek and Roman heroes. There is nothing dull about Plutarch's "Lives."

Monks and abbots of the early Middle ages were the earliest British biographers. Their subjects were mostly saints. The first real English biography was the life story of Sir Thomas More by his son in-law, William Roper. Every angler loves his Izaak Walton, but every angler does not know that old Izaak wrote a delightful series of lives of people of his time.

Gain in Industrial Employment Reported—Steel Industry Accused of Price Boosting and Fixing—Japan and U. S. Exchange Good Will Notes—Navy Bill Passes.

SECRETARY OF LABOR FRANCES PERKINS announces a jump of 345,000 in industrial employment and a gain of $12,000,000 in weekly pay rolls between January 15 and February 15.

Secretary Perkins

"Factory employment increased 6.1 per cent while pay rolls rose 12.6 per cent," Secretary Perkins said in summing up the developments. She added that since March of last year 2,400,000 workers have returned to industrial jobs and $67,000,000 added to the weekly pay rolls.

Secretary Perkins pointed out that her survey of industrial employment covers only a small part of the total business field.

"The manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries covered," she explained, "normally employ only 20,000,000 of the 49,000,000 gainful workers of the country and therefore these totals do not indicate all changes in employment. To them should be added 10,000 workers reported by the interstate commerce commission to have been taken on during the last month by Class 1 steam railroads, and gains in agricultural employment which normally take place at this time with the beginning of farming activities in the Southern states.

"The increases in employment and pay roll in the automobile industry were the outstanding gains of the month. The agricultural implement industry reported employment gains of 14.9 per cent and machine tools a rise of 15 per cent, continuing the gains which have marked every month since last May and June.

"Industries allied with building construction also showed increased operations."

PRICE fixing and price boosting, tending to discriminate against small enterprises, are current practices in the steel industry under its NRA code, the federal trade commission declares in a report to the senate.

That there has been price fixing as well as increases in prices of steel products during the period covered by the inquiry, the commission declares, are conclusions warranted by ample facts. Under the provisions of the code and the methods of its application prices for any given product at any point of delivery are uniform. This is a direct violation of the order to desist from the Pittsburgh plus practice.

The steel code, according to the trade commission, is devised to lodge control of the industry with the United States Steel corporation and other large producers, to take business away from little manufacturers, to discriminate against certain fabricators and producing centers and to discriminate in favor of powerful customers like the automobile industry.

At a press conference at the White House the President indicated that he was not satisfied with the way the steel code is operating. There were signs the Executive might reopen the code and call for drastic revisions to protect consumers and independent manufacturers from price fixing and increased costs.

ASSURANCES of cordial regard and pledges of a desire for the settlement of any differences by amicable means were expressed in an exchange of notes between Secretary of State Hull and Koki Hirota, Japanese foreign minister. The exchange of notes was the outcome of interchanges initiated by Japan in furtherance of a foreign policy the general purpose of which is to conciliate the United States. Japan is intent upon persuading the United States to abandon the policy of obstruction of Japanese occupation of Manchuria and to recognize the Japanese dominated state of Manchukuo.

Secretary Hull

Hirota expressed the firm belief that "no question exists between our two countries that is fundamentally incapable of amicable solution."

Hull, in concurring with that statement, said he would be glad to receive "any suggestion calculated to maintain and to increase that friendliness and cordiality which have constantly marked, since the conclusion of our first treaty, the relations between our two countries."

Japan let it be known unofficially recently that it desires an increase in its naval ratio with the United States and Great Britain under the Washington and London naval treaties and would like to enter preliminary discussions.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a letter to the senate and house banking committees, asked congress to set up twelve industrial credit banks which he had been told would safeguard the jobs of 346,000 persons and create work for 378,000 more. Immediately after the President's wishes were known legislation was introduced in both houses giving the federal reserve system authority to create the banks, financing them by selling $140,000,000 of stock to the treasury.

The plight of the "small or medium size" industrialist was stressed by the President, and he cited results of a survey indicating that such industry was badly in need of $700,000,000 working capital.

A RAY of hope for unpaid school teachers appeared when a house subcommittee was ordered to draft legislation authorizing direct federal grants to needy school systems throughout the country. The primary purpose of the proposed grants would be to insure the operation of schools for a minimum term each year.

A serious curtailment of educational facilities in many sections of the country has been forced by lack of funds, according to the committee, with consequent result that thousands of children are not receiving the proper amount of instruction. An inability to pay teachers is the most pressing problem.

A large part of the proposed federal grants will be available for the payment of salaries to unpaid teachers.

Under the direct grant measure proposed by the education committee it was understood, the necessary funds would be supplied either by the federal Emergency Relief administration or the Public Works administration.

SPEAKING before an assembly of 5,000 cheering chief Fascists Premier Mussolini outlined a 60-year program of internal and external expansion which, he predicted, would in the Twenty-first century give Italy the "primacy of the world." That century, he said, will be a "black shirt era."

Mussolini

"In this age of plans," Il Duce declared, "I want to lay before you a plan not for five years or ten years but for 60 years carrying on to the Twenty-first century, at which time Italy will have the primacy of the world.

"Italy has no future in the West and North. Her future lies to the East and South in Asia and Africa. The vast resources of Africa must be valorized and Africa brought within the civilized circle.

"I do not refer to conquest of territory but to natural expansion. We demand that nations which have already arrived in Africa do not block at every step Italian expansion."

Here, it was said, he was referring particularly to France.

Internally, Mussolini said, immediate objectives are completion of swamp reclamation by 1940, new aqueducts and highways, plans to recreate Italian municipalities, complete rebuilding of 500,000 rural houses and repairs to 930,000 rural houses, a work of 30 years.

"Every rural person will have a clean and healthy house," he asserted. "Only in this way can the rush to the city be combated."

In the midst of a pandemonium of applause Mussolini said Fascism "became universal in 1929."

"But in this phenomenon," he continued, "it is necessary to distinguish positive from negative Fascism. Positive Fascism knows how to destroy the old and rebuild the new, whereas negative Fascism knows only how to destroy."

EXPANSION of the navy to treaty limitations is now assured with the passage by congress of the Vinson-Trammell bill. The bill calls for the construction of 102 warships and an increase of 1,184 in the naval airplane strength at a cost estimated at between $570,000,000 and $700,000,000 spread over five years.

The bill merely "authorizes" a treaty navy. Appropriations must follow in order to translate the action into ships and planes.

Private builders of ships and planes for the navy are limited in the bill to a 10 per cent profit on the "contract price," excepting on contracts involving $10,000 or less.

Alternate warships must be built in government navy yards, unless the President determines that emergency conditions require change of that schedule.

A BROAD national program for reducing the nation's supply of milk from 10 to 20 per cent in return for federal cash payments to the individual milk producer was proposed to the dairy industry of the country by the Agricultural Adjustment administration. The program was evolved after months of effort by AAA experts.

The plan suggested by the administration would involve some $165,000,000 at the outset, it was said, with prospects that the cost might rise as high as $300,000,000. It would be financed by a processing tax of a cent per pound on butter fat, gradually increasing as the program advanced, to a peak of 5 cents per pound.

THE man who works for a living will get a break if amendments to the income tax law proposed by the senate finance committee are finally adopted. These amendments would take more taxes from big estates and reduce the tax on smaller incomes.

Chairman Harrison estimated that the net result of the changes proposed would add $50,000,000 of annual revenue to the bill.

The committee voted unanimously for a proposal to continue the one-tenth of 1 per cent corporation capital stock and 5 per cent excess profits tax levy, which were repealed when repeal put liquor taxes into effect.

These taxes would have expired July 1. Under the new proposal they would become effective again July 1, 1935. Experts estimated the revenue from these taxes at $95,000,000.

The reduction in income taxes would come in the form of a 10 per cent credit to be allowed on earned income up to $20,000.

The estate amendment would increase taxes on such property to a maximum of 50 per cent as against the present 45 per cent, the raises ranging from 1 per cent on estates valued between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 to 5 per cent on those over $10,000,000.

TRACTS urging the public to donate cash to promote the sport of flying in Germany were circulated in Berlin Sunday. Under the Versailles treaty public funds are not permitted to be used to stimulate aviation, but the leaflet points out that the treaty does not refer to private initiative, and adds:

Premier Goering

"We are unable to construct military planes, but the development of the sport of flying and training German people as flyers is entirely dependent upon ourselves and our readiness to make sacrifices."

The demand for a German air force was also emphasized by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia and reichsminister of aviation, in speaking at a flying exhibition at the Essen airport. Goering declared that Germany can enjoy no security, no peace, no equality until she is granted the right to defend herself in the air. This demand cannot be altered, the air minister proclaimed.

"If other countries are permitted the heaviest weapons of attack in the air, Germany at least must be given the right of defense," he said.

ANOTHER step forward in developing trade between the United States and Austria was taken with the recent decision of the Austro-American commercial interests in Vienna to found an American Chamber of Commerce in Vienna. Later a cognate institution is also to be established in Washington.

The decision to open up a chamber of commerce here is the result of lengthy study by a committee appointed some time ago "for founding a special organization to develop trade and tourist traffic between Austria and America."

The organization of the American Chamber of Commerce has the backing of President Ernst Streeruwitz of the Vienna Chamber of Commerce, American Consul General E. L. Harris, and Commercial Attache J. H. Hughes.

General inquiry has indicated that the United States can get a bigger share of the Austrian market through this way of making an intensive study of detailed openings for exports than through any new general trade agreements.

THE city of Hakodate, most important port in northern Japan, was reduced to a smoldering shambles as the result of a devastating fire. One thousand persons are dead and three thousand are injured. The fire followed in the wake of a driving equinoctial windstorm which tore through northern and western Japan. A total of 150,000 of the city's 210,000 inhabitants are homeless. Thirty-seven thousand of the 48,000 houses were burned to the ground.

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU reported to President Roosevelt that income tax receipts for the first quarter of the year were well above estimates and far more than a year ago.

Payments to the close of business March 15, the day when all returns were due, were $147,794,000. In announcing this figure on the basis of telegraphic reports from collectors, the treasury said corresponding collections last year were $99,847,000.

In 1933, however, the date for filing returns was extended from March 15 to March 31, after the bank holiday.

Treasury estimates of income tax payments for March are $250,000,000 as compared with $174,000,000 last March.

A NEW and serious controversy has arisen in the railroad industry. Unexpectedly, representatives of the railroad brotherhoods flatly rejected a compromise wage settlement suggested by President Roosevelt, calling for a continuation of their 10 per cent pay reduction until April 30, 1935, and demanded an immediate restoration of predepression wages for all railroad workers.

The action, taken by the Railway Labor Executives' association, threw negotiations looking to an amicable settlement of the rail wage situation into a virtual uproar and precipitated what the spokesmen of the railway managements called a "serious situation."

Poe's Graphic Sketch of Wissahickon Beauty

When Edgar Allan Poe lived and worked in Philadelphia from 1838 to 1844 the scenic beauties of the Wissahickon valley impressed the poet so much that he gave a vivid description of the region in a sketch with himself as the narrator.

The tale, entitled "Morning on the Wissahickon," reveals Poe drifting in a skiff upon the surface of the stream during a sultry summer day. In half slumber he lets his imagination conjure up visions of the Wissahickon of Indian days, "when picnics were undreamed of."

The picture is in striking contrast to the popular conception of the half-starved unhappy genius who wrote such morbid works as "The Raven" and "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," while living at 530 North Seventh street, where the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of his birthday was recently celebrated at a brilliant gathering of writers and other notables. The occasion also marked the opening of the Poe house as a shrine to his memory.

Extolling the beauties of the Wissahickon, Poe declared that "were it flowing in England it would be the theme of every bard, and the common topic of every tongue, if, indeed its banks were not parceled off in lots at exorbitant prices, as building sites for the villas of the opulent."

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Herschel Norton, 10, Sacramento patient at the Shrine hospital in San Francisco, a sufferer from infantile paralysis, has received a personal letter of encouragement from President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Imperial valley will harvest only 27,904 acres of cantaloupes this season, compared with 35,536 last year and 45,750 in 1932. In addition to the cantaloupe acreage there are 3,837 acres of honeydews and 2,550 of honeyballs, both of these figures representing decreases from last year's plantings.

Construction will be started on the Hueneme (Ventura county) harbor project early this summer, it was announced by Harold A. Forbes, central figure in the negotiations at Washington which resulted in the $1,600,000 PWA loan for the undertaking. Plans and specifications for the $2,500,000 project are now in the hands of F. E. Trask, state PWA engineer.

Petitions calling for repeal of the state sales tax, and a copy of the proposed constitutional amendment to be voted on at the August 28th primary election have been received in Tehama and other counties of the state. The California County Tax Equalization association, opposing the proposed change, warns members that the amendment would "forever prohibit any method of sales tax in California, placing all taxes on the land."

State Finance Director Rolland Vandegrift is against equalization board liquor inspectors using badges that might "reflect on state police." For that reason he has refused to approve requisitions for the badges despite the fact they already have been received and are being worn in many instances by the inspectors.

The executive committee of the California department of the American Legion voted recently in Marysville to voice no official opinion on the United States air-mail problem. The committee passed resolutions expressing faith in the California veterans' welfare board in handling delinquencies among home and farm buyers under the State bond act for veterans.

Organization of a Mills college council, headed by former President Hoover, was announced by authorities of the women's educational institution in Oakland recently.

Santa Barbara's unique county courthouse will be transformed into a flower fairyland on April 6, 7 and 8. On those dates, the annual spring flower show will be held there.

Sacramento women's clubs have attacked their married "working sisters" for keeping men—heads of families—from getting state jobs. State departmental heads agree with the club in press statements but see no way the evil can be curbed except by legislation. Once tried, the working women ban bill, cost one assemblyman his job.

Kern county sheepmen are optimistic about the outlook in their industry this spring, with opening quotations for wool being from 20 to 26 cents a pound and wool in large quantities now being clipped. Spring lambs, it is estimated, will bring from $5 to $6.50 a head, with the present estimate being 150,000 head for that county's yield.

When an irrigation district becomes in default 20 per cent on its bond obligations, it automatically and immediately comes under the jurisdiction of the California Districts Securities Commission. This is the ruling given by U. S. Webb, attorney general, to Herman S. Bonte, secretary of the commission.

Children of California soldiers killed in the World war are setting a high mark in schools, according to John P. Brennan, director of the state department of military and veterans' affairs. There are 620 of these students in California.

A $5,000,000 federal grant as the first "new deal" for the heretofore unaided dairy industry in California has been asked of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in Berkeley for complete bovine tuberculosis eradication in the state. By destroying some 160,000 cows in the state now afflicted with tuberculosis, the committee of the California dairy council felt that California dairymen would be given cash that would set them on their feet, production would be controlled, and dairymen from the entire western slope would find a new market in the state.

Fifteen hundred artists throughout California have been invited to submit oil paintings for the All-California Art Exhibition to be held at the Los Angeles Biltmore May 15 to June 15 under auspices of the Los Angeles Art association.

An application by the Horticultural Development District of Butte county for a $1,136,891 loan to rehabilitate citrus groves damaged by frost has been made of the federal Public Works Administration. A total of 2,905 acres of citrus land is involved.

The Razzberry Press, banned from the University of California campus last year, but later given a new lease on life, came out again recently, causing an uproar. It charged one member of the California faculty with practicing nudism, receiving friends and students in his home while clad in the birthday suit.

Approximately 4,000 Los Angeles county merchants, out of a total of 73,000 who have taken out sales tax permits, are delinquent in their tax payments and their cases are being cleared at the rate of 150 a day, according to Edwin T. Keiser, Los Angeles county sales tax administrator. Los Angeles county pays about five-eighths of the state return on sales tax.

Thousands of existing trust deeds within Los Angeles and other counties of the state are affected by a recent ruling in Los Angeles by Superior Judge Gould, who held that the instruments which were executed prior to August 22, 1933, may be foreclosed by court action at the instance of the beneficiary and with the consent of the trustor even should the trustee object. The court procedure assures to the debtor a year's period of redemption not allowed under former customs.

Cities which borrowed funds under the state unemployment relief bond issue and now find themselves in a favorable financial position which will enable them to repay the loan in less than the prescribed 14 years are placed in an odd position by an opinion from Attorney General Webb. He states that California must receive 14 years' interest on the money no matter how short a time the loan is paid back in.

Pigs and not dogs will be subjects in future experiments of Dr. Robert Cornish to restore life after death. Dogs have too many friends opposed to the Berkeley professor's experiments. Three little pigs have none.

Lawrence T. Hopkinson, chief fisheries investigator for the United States Tariff Commission and National Recovery Administration, told San Diego cannery and fishing leaders recently that their industry may be the first in the country to obtain action under the potent Three-E clause of the Industrial code, which allows the president to clamp a radical prohibitive tariff on foreign imports which may be found to endanger the life of American industry.

Preventing Bad Dreams

YOU find yourself dreaming for two or three nights in succession and the dreams are not pleasant. All sorts of unpleasant situations arise in these dreams, in some of which you are a coward, sometimes see terrible accidents occur, perhaps a loved one is in danger, and othe distressing events occur, so that it is with great relief that you wake to find that it was only a dream.

You try to remember what you had eaten that night before you retired only to find that it was the same as usual, so that the bad dream was not due to food.

As you know we have those who can interpret dreams or at least claim to be able to do so.

There are many well known nerve specialists who have seemingly been able to help certain nervous cases by interpreting their dreams; bringing them into the light of day as it were.

What may be the cause of these bad dreams? Are they due to some "mental" or nervous condition?

There is no question but that our mental attitude, our mental condition (particularly if we are tired mentally) often has much to do with causing dreams.

However one of the frequent causes of bad dreams and one that is overlooked, is that waste products remain too long in the system and act as a poison in the blood. It is this poison that often causes bad dreams. Dr. S. Kalter, Munich, was able to give help to a number of nervous patients afflicted with bad dreams by making sure that these wastes were thrown out of the body. The wastes usually accumulate by eating more food than the body needs.

By the use of medicines which remove wastes not only from the large intestines but from the blood also, dreams are prevented in many cases.

By the simple method of doing some hard physical work such as sawing wood, shoveling sand, perspiration is induced, the bowels move regularly, excess wastes are removed and no bad dreams occur.

This method of hard physical exercise, instead of complete rest, has cured many "mental" cases.

Mental Hygiene in Childhood

IT HAS been said that childhood is the golden period for mental hygiene.

Educators tells us that if they can get children from birth to the age of seven, they can do the real foundation work for life.

What is mental hygiene anyway? Is it some special department or departments of life and training?

As a matter of fact mental hygiene simply means preparing or training children and adults in such a way that they can adjust themselves to life; that is be able to earn a living and be able to get along with other people, respecting the rights of others, and seeing that others respect their rights also.

And the training for mental hygiene must begin in the home with the parents. A quarrelsome, nagging, untidy home with many emotional upsets, is bound to affect the emotions and actions of the children.

It was my privilege some years ago to examine some hundreds of boys in a reformatory.

I found all types of boys, mental and physical, but the outstanding fact I got from questioning and from the records was that most of these boys came from unhappy quarrelsome homes. By actual count I found that in more than one-half the cases, the parents of these boys were not living together.

Truly childhood is the period when everything possible must be done to prevent frequent mental, moral and physical defects.

Dr. F. P. Norburg, Jacksonville, Ill., says "Childhood is the golden period of mental hygiene because it became apparent that when one discusses nervous and mental illnesses, delinquency, dependence on others, education and industrial failure, divorce and broken homes, one was not discussing a series of different problems, but really the same problem, that is the inability of individuals to adjust themselves to a complex social life, because of the lack of control of their emotions. And as the ground work for organizing or controlling the emotions is laid in childhood that period becomes the golden period of mental hygiene."

The thought then is that all of us should think of our own home life and our obligations to our children, that teachers always insist kindly but firmly on discipline, that fairness to the child and to his companions be ever uppermost in mind.

If we keep our mental balance, children will likely do the same.

Jefferson Davis' Power

Jefferson Davis first became prominent in politics as a member of the house of representatives and later as a senator from Mississippi. He served in the Mexican war, having been educated at West Point. During President Pierce's administration Davis was secretary of war, and was said to rule both President and cabinet. In 1857 he was returned to the senate, where he remained until chosen President of the Confederacy in 1861.

Easter At The Airport

Sunrise on the plateau Easter morning. The great cross of logs towering over the throng come to worship. The scene of distant snowy peaks and tree grown hills. Nevada City, a cradle of California history, down in the lovely hollow below. The fresh air blowing fragrant from the pines and the changing colors of the sky. An anthem rising clear, mounting and spreading in revered and beautiful cadences. The prayer, minister and people in accord.

Then out of the dim distances an airplan swooping down, settling gracefully, running along the leveled earth to a stop.

One wonders what the Great Redeemer would have said and thought, had He risen, not three days after the Cross, but nineteen centuries later. Would He pity us, in our pitiful perplexities, in our old human nature and in our new mechanical and scientific environment? Would He, in his infinite wisdom preach us a New Gospel for the times so startling new, or would he repeat again the Sermon on the Mount, holding it sufficient to guide us still after the centuries of change and struggle? Would He see the civilized world standing today on the brink of another plunge into merieval darkness, as the wise men of today fear?

Though all the genius begotten of science were centered on greater and greater speed, on water, on land and in the air, will that speed ever permit us to escape the responsibility implicit in the brotherhood of humanity?

These are random thoughts of an Easter morning.

Cabbages and Kings

By CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN

The landscape just now is beautiful with a green grass carpet, green foliaged wild shrubs with gorgeous blossoms. Were it not for the fact that otherwise normal people dump great piles of old tin cans and rubbish along the way, the whole picture would be entrancing But these hideous piles of rusty scraggly cans take away enough of the beauty to partially destroy the otherwise gorgeous natural picture.

Just now the Red Bud shrub is at the height of it's flowering season and it is beautiful. It does make beautiful house decorations. There is the temptation to take some, but there is no real excuse for wantonly tearing whole sides off the shrub thus leaving the white ends of the torn branch sticking up like the white ribs of a weather beaten corpse. I do not know whether it is lawful to take the Red Bud flowers, but if it is, they should be cut neatly on a slant and then only at the joints. This will not destroy the beauty of the plant and in some cases the pruning may even be said to be beneficial.

Someone said in a newspaper interview recently, that as long as our present capitalistic system endured, we could not hope for peace. I think this is partially true. There is one thing sure, as long as our money and our food products (two commodities of which we all must possess a little) are entirely in the hands of the banking class. We cannot hope to reach anything but a pseudo prosperity. Further than this, our present system of food distribution with it's terrific waste and economic abuses, such as gambling and minipulation, is one of the most potent contributors to such debacles as we have witnessed since 1929. I am not ready at a moment's notice to offer a general panacea for the above mentioned condition. However, it does not need a savant to see that a remedy can be figureu out as a general benefit. But it's complete execution might take a considerable period of years.

A bad traffic hazard exists at the junction of Main and Commercial streets. Cars are parked on both sides of the streets, which leaves a very narrow one way passage on an almost blind turn. This condition can easily be remedied by making a no-parking space for about three car lengths on Commercial East side and by having a no parking space on the West side of Commercial, directly in front of the Coffee Cup restaurant and about two car lengths toward the bridge, otherwise some bad accidents will happen.

At the sunrise Easter service at the airport yesterday morning, a singer was scheduled to sing a solo of considerable difficulty, and because of someones error, without the organ accompaniment. She sang the selection beautifully, and as she was leaving the airport after the song, a man in overalls and slouch hat stepped up to her, took off his hat, and in substance said, "that was beautifully done and you did not need the help of the music." We were all moved by this show of complete sincerity. It simply goes to show that the music of an artist, the song in this particular instance, has entrance to the hearts of all humanity. We mean to pay a compliment to Mrs. Talbot, who sang the solo without benefit of organ accompaniment as scheduled. The compliment of the overalled gentleman was richly deserved. Be it said Mr. L. E. Sweeney had never seen the music before, did not know the piece, yet he ably assisted Mrs. Talbot with the trumpet.

THE NEW DEAL

The New Deal in Grass Valley has become very popular with those who like an assortment of drinks. They carry a complete line of bottle beer, wine and liquor.

The management has appointed the bar with all the latest fixtures to keep draught beer properly cooled and served at its best and this accounts for their large trade from all this section of Grass Valley.

Imported wines and assorted liquors are sold here in many varieties at very reasonable prices. The place has been established with the idea that a good bar would be appreciated and the fact that this has been well founded is proven by the large trade they receive from all the surrounding teritory.

In addition to the drinks served here they have prvate booths for the convenience of family groups.

Sandwiches are also served at the bar. It is without doubt that the New Deal is well equipped to serve most everything in the drink line and also sell liquor in packages.

It is always a popular place to go when in Grass Valley as you are sure to find just what you want here at a reasonable price.

GRASS VALLEY MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS

EXCELLS IN ARTISTIC WORK

The Grass Valley Marble and Granite Works enjoys the distinction of being one of the leading authorities on memorials in this section and is known for miles around their home city.

The yards and works are stocked with the leading granites and marbles. The shops are equipped for the production of work both large and small.

Mr. T. J. Ahern, the owner, is more than a mere carver of stone as he has had 47 years experience and is an artist in this class of work and each monument produced here shows the stamp of an artist.

He is able to artistically produce any design that one may have in mind or will submit original designs that will be in keeping with the size of work desired.

On hand at all times there is a large collection of memorials that can be purchased and may be erected on a few days notice.

The scope of work covers everything from the simplest slab to the imposing monument.

The workmanship in the setting of the memorials is very permanent as they are all placed on foundations that will endure with the centuries. The yards are located on Kidder Avenue, opposite the Masonic cemetery. Phone 218—W.

EMPIRE DAIRY; NATURAL MILK DISTRIBUTORS

During the last decade the importance of the milk supply and its source of purity have received much attention and in this section there is no one that has made a closer study of the subject than the Empire Dairy at Grass Valley, owned and operated by John Bieber. This is one of the most modern dairies in this section, having installeld all the latest equipment for the proper handling of all the dairy products which include milk, sweet cream, butter, buttermilk and cottage cheese.

The milk from this dairy is from some of the finest T. B. tested cows in the state. They are all properly cared for, fed scientific feed and the milking is conducted under the most careful conditions.

They have a large nad growing patronage and number among their customers some of the leading families of this section of the county.

The service is excellent and orer the best of delivery, and every precaution is taken in the time of transit to see that it arrives in the best of condition. The Dairy is located at 427 Kate Hays Street, Grass Valley—Phone 257.

ACME BODY & FENDER WKS.

Acme body and fender works that are located at 136 East Main street, Grass Valley— Phone 205—J has greatly prolonged the life of many a car and truck. In the fender department they offer a most complete service, taking out all dents and making the fenders look like new.

One of the features of their service that is highly important is the repairing and replacing of wrecked bodies. No matter how bad the accident may be, they will take the car and rebuild it so that all marks are gone and it give as good service as ever.

They also specialize in axle and frame work and if you have overturned or gotten into a smash-up and bent or twisted your axle or frame they are prepared to straighten it out and put it in as satisfactory shape as before.

They offer an excellent service in automobile painting and use Duco which has gained a nation-wide reputation as the peer of all lacquer finishes for automobile bodies. They offer you a wide range of colors to choose from and you will only lose the use of your car a very short time.

In this review we are glad to compliment Mr.F. O. Tomkins upon the excellent workmanship and rapid service with which he serves this community and anyone in need of such services will do well to call around and talk it over with him.

MARYSVILLE—NEVADA CITY AUTO STAGE LINE

POPULAR DAILY AND SPECIAL EXPRESS AND PASSENGER SERVICE OFFERED

It is eminently fitting in this comprehensive revieiw to give due credit to the activities of this local concern, for it is well conducted with a record during which time t has become one of our most potent utility assets.

This business has taken its place in the transportation business of this section of Marysville and Nevada City and has opened up many towns to frequent transportation that were before isolated communities. Thus this stage service renders an educational, social and business service that is important to the progress and development of this section of the county.

Daily and special express and passenger service is both rendered at frequent and regular intervals at a very nominal rate by means of modern equipment.

Real estate values over the territory they traverse have been increased by reason of the exsellent and frequent service.

Mrs. Vinita A. Jones, the owner has become thoroughly conversant with the business and is always striving to render just a little better service to be of the utmost value to this and the surrounding towns in which this service is extended.

TAYLOR FOUNDRY AND ENGINEERING COMPANY

To create a manufacturing center, a foundry is the first step as other industries will never locate where there is no foundry to aid in keeping the machinery on the move.

This popular foundry located at 389 Mill Street, Grass Valley in addition to special work of this kind is a great aid to our mining and manufacturing in the casting and repairing of its machinery, and have saved much time and expense to their many patrons in doing this class of work here at home.

The casting department is a great accomodation to the public and aids in keeping business in this part of Nevada County on the move.

They have saved the manufacturers mining companies, and farmers many days time by the casting of new parts when it would have taken weeks to get a new part from some distant city.

In this review of our progress, we cannot fail to compliment Mr. Taylor the owner of the foundry upon the excellent manner in which it is conducted and to say that it has been a decided factor in the industrial life of the community. With the changing of times the future of the enterprise is fraught with great promise.

FRENCH CORRAL

(By Mrs. Kate M. Sulivan)

FRENCH CORRAL, March 28th.—The past week has brought many old time residents back to look in on the old home place. The raveges of fire and time had done their cruel work, and in one instance only some outdoor shrubs, rosebushes etc., planted by a dear mother's hands, remain to mark the spot where happy childhood days were spent; and in another instance two Oleander bushes that were reduced to ashes along with the house, have come up from the roots, and are there today, marking the spot with their ever-green leaves, and beautiful pink flowers. This reminds us of a bit of history, which we cannot refrain from mention: The Oleander was brought to French Corral by James Gorman, who was one of Frenmont's men and among the first settlers in French Corral. Jimmie was a gardener and took a great pride in having the choicest of fruits and most beautiful flowers in his home garden and orchard—Oh if we could but go back and spend some time with those early settlers and record every word of the valuable information they could give us. What history it would make! But Alas! for they are in the eternal past.

The Mahoney brothers, John and Dan, who are of our early day "big family" for that is what the early day people seemed to be—one great big happy family,--are now residents of Spokane, Washington, but California is their native state and the home of their early life from babyhood to early manhood. For the past two months they have toured the state from end to end. Boulder dam also had much interest for them, but they did not overlook their home town of French Corral and their many friends here had a pleasant visit with them during the past week. David Mahoney was for many years on the staff of Nevada County as a school teacher. He has made a close study of the affairs of our government. Both men are democrats and this is what they said: "By all means return Hiram Johnson to his seat in Congress."

Mrs. A. Browning and family were visitors in Nevada City last Thursday.

Mrs. H. O. Baker, of Sacramento, spent the week-end with her parents in French Corral.

Lee Stockdale, of Sacramento, had business here last week.

The Union Sunday School continues with good attendance and are planning a picnic soon.

Sunday a week ago was visitors' day from old-time residents.

Thos. F. Fogarty, of Marysville, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Darneal and son, Martie, of Los Gatos, and Miss Dee Darneal, of Berkeley, were of one party who paid a visit to their old home town.

Mr. Darneal has again been made postmaster at Loos Gatos, position he held during the Wilson Administration.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Butterfield, of Sacramento were of another party of Sunday visitors. All but Mr. Butterfield were old residents and he was one of the early employees on the Colgate Electric plant near this place. The ladies were Clara and Lottie Heath, of this place. The old Heath home still remains one of the early time relics, but the surroundings are sadly changed from the days of their former occupation.

It was a great pleasure to meet the old frineds but their visit was all too short.

The laying off of several men in the NRA service in this section, has brought a gloomy outlook, but we hope that some change may bring about their speedy return to the ranks of the employed.

NORTH SAN JUAN

By MRS. F. M. HARRIS

NORTH SAN JUAN, March 27—While we have all been enjoying the wonderful winter, other parts of our country have been having unusually mild weather also. Letters from our friends residing in northern Washington report that the ground has not been frozen this winter; strawberries were picked there the day before Christmas, and early gardens were furnishing the tables with lettuce, onions and radishes.

In Oregon and Montana the farmers put up hay last summer expecting to sell it to stockmen in the winter, but the mild weather has allowed the cattle to run on the ranges all through the year without requiring extra feed.

Allen Ennis had his tonsils removed by Doctor Reed, of Nevada City, on the 13th. He was quite ill for some days as the tonsils were large and infected. At the present time he is again able to be at work.

A very interesting meeting of the Ladies Aid was held on their usual ay, the third Thursday of the month. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Buckner were present, as was Mrs. Lyser, of the San Juan Mine.

Mr. Fugit, who has been camping and mining in the American Diggings this past winter, has moved to Dobbins where he has a contract to do some wood chopping.

Mr. and Mrs. George Green, of Sebastopol have been enjoying a visit of some weeks in Long Beach and have written friends here that they are soon to take a trip east to their old home in Michigan.

Hubert Coffey, of Oroville, a one time resident of French Corral, paid a visit to San Juan last Thursday.

Dan and John Mahoney, of Boise, Idho, former residents of French Corral, revisited their old home town and other places on the ridge, one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Burnett of Sweetland, spent a week in Oakland, where they visited Mr. Burnett's mother.

A Few Little Smiles

TICKLING THE PALATE

"This duck is certainly enough to tickle the palate," the boarder told his landlady. The woman beamed. "I'm very glad you like my cooking," she replied.

The boarder looked squarely at her. "I didn't say I liked your cooking," he quickly replied. "I said that this duck is enough to tickle the palate. I was referring to the feathers you left on it."—London Answers.

Stretching It

"Now, what about some elastic?" suggested the commercial traveler who was getting an order from an Aberdeen shopkeeper.

Na, na," said the Aberdonian. "I'm for nae mair o' it. I couldna measure a yaird o' your last consignment wi'oot the stuff snapping."—Montreal Star.

True Enough

An Irish small farmer was asked by his landlord if the report of his intended second marriage was true, and replied: "It is, yer honor."

"But your first wife has only been dead a week, Pat," said the landlord.

"An' shure," retorted Pat, "she's as dead now as she ever will be, yer honor."—Border Cities Star.

He Can Teach Us

"Your son must be quite a man by now. How is he getting along?" asked an old friend.

"He's doing real well," responded the father. "He got through high school in five years and college in six and now he's learning to keep his pencil during business hours."

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. Years before, at the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for ranching and cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christens Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side.

Rance Kershaw's not too stable heart leaped in triumph. "Keep your check," he ordered harshly, "and I'll keep my water."

Lorraine Kershaw came out of the house. Straight down the little graveled walk she came to the gate. Nate Tichenor noticed how straight she walked; noticed, too that she had been weeping recently. She was a strikingly pretty girl; her hair was jet-black and shiny; her eyes large and dark and lustrous; her skin a pale ivory with a faint rose radiance seeping up through it.

"The Hensley apology is accepted," she cried in a clear ringing voice. "And you may keep your check." That fence was charged off to depreciation before you and I were born. Please give our compliments to your mother and your aunts and say that the Kershaws will be very pleased to see that hereafter the Bar H ranch gets all the water the Circle K can give it."

"They won't, either," old Rance shouted.

"Pay no attention to father," the girl admonished, in a tone meant for young Tichenor's ears alone. "He can't help holding his ancient grudge. But the Bar H shall have the water. I give you my word of honor it shall. This morning at eleven o'clock I became the foreman of the Circle K, and I'll keep the floodgates closed at our diversion dam and turn the water into your irrigation ditches when we're done with it, instead of diverting it back into Eden Valley creek. Run along now, Nate Tichenor, and may God bless you and protect you and bring you safe back to your mother in Eden Valley."

He stared at her. And then he blinked because the tears of emotion were in his boy's eyes. He held out his hand across the gate. "Good-by, Lorry Kershaw," he said with difficulty. "I thank you with all my heart. You're mighty sweet."

She accepted his hand, to the great scandal of her father; she stood at the gate and watched him jog away down the valley, sitting very straight in his carved and silver-mounted stock-saddle.

"Come, come, old settler," she said. "It's time to cease hurling maledictions and start praying. And I promised him the water."

He was silent at that. Then: "Well, I suppose it won't hurt us to let 'em have it." He must have thought then of his own gallant stripling son. "Just as well to take things easy now, Lorry. Even if they both come back they'll never shoot each other. If that Tichenor pup's a fair sample, the Hensley clan ain't run to seed in this generation."

Nate Tichenor's farewell sentence came back to her. She patted her father's cheek. "You're mighty sweet," she said.

* * * * * * *

Nathan Tichenor had come back to Eden Valley. He arrived in a glittering limousine, driven by a liveried chauffeur, beside whom sat a dignified middle-aged individual any Forlorn Valleyite would have accepted as a banker or railroad president but who was in reality Nathan Tichenor's English valet.

Arrived in the grass-grown farmyard of the deserted Bar H headquarters, Tichenor alighted.

"Well, lads, this is where I was born and raised," Nate Tichenor spoke finally.

The house reeked of that indescribable odor inseparable from closed and deserted houses, but a cursory inventory satisfied Tichenor that the contents had not been molested.

"Bring in the meats and groceries I purchased in Gold Run, Darby," he ordered the chauffeur. "There should be firewood in the woodshed. Start a fire in that fireplace. Joseph (to the valet), get busy and organize our housekeeping, while I take a run up the valley to call on a neighbor."

When Nate returned from his visit up the valley, Joseph had the house swept and aired, beds made, and a luncheon in preparation. Tichenor was prowling around the venerable home of his ancestors, reviving old memories, when upon his ears impigned the steady, insistent tooting of an automobile siren. "Somebody up on the valley road wants something," he decided.

Tichenor glanced out the window and saw an automobile with two persons in it halted on the main road just outside the entrance to the Bar H headquarters.

"They must want me," he decided. "Now, how do they know I'm here?" He pondered. "Ah, yes. Smoke is rising from my chimney. Kershaws, I wonder? Must be the Kershaws or they'd drive in."

He took a heavy pistol from his bag, fitted it into a shoulder holster, put on his coat to conceal the weapon, went to the garage, backed his car out and whirled away up the ranch road to the gate, where he alighted and lifted his hat to Lorry Kershaw.

"I'm Lorraine Kershaw, Mr. Tichenor, and I am in trouble. My father has just died."

"Where?"

"Here, beside me—against my shoulder. He's so—heavy and limp—I can't handle him—can't manage to drive."

Nate Tichenor opened the gate, came around to the side of her car warily, for he suspected a trap, stepped up in the running board and looked into Ranceford Kershaw's face, over which the sickly pallor of death was already spreading. He reached for the old man's pulse.

"Yes, he's dead, Miss Kershaw," he announced. "What do you want to do? Take him back into Valley Center or home?"

"Home," she replied brokenly.

He stepped into the tonneau, lifted the dead man back over the seat and laid him gently down on the tonneau seat. "Drive slowly and I'll follow in my car," he said.

He alighted and stood beside her. "I'm very sorry," he said. "I regret that he has passed away before I had an opportunity to talk with him. I was up at your ranch-house this morning, but there was nobody home."

"You—you called—on us! Why?"

"To tell you and your father I was coming back to Eden Valley—to stay—and to suggest that we become neighbors—at last. I'm tired being an enemy. It's a job I never relished."

"Is that why you didn't demand additional security when father renewed his note to you, even though you knew the value of the cattle originally mortgaged had shrunk more than half?"

He nodded.

"I wish—I wish—we'd known. He thought—when he saw the smoke coming from your chimney—he thought—"

"He thought I'd turned up at last to smash him! Poor man! I've been dilatory. But is that any reason why we shouldn't shake hands, Miss Lorraine?"

She took his proffered hand in both of hers and now she was no longer brave. "Oh, Nate Tichenor," she sobbed, "I'm alone—all alone—alone!"

'No, you're not," he reminded her. "But have your little crying spell all out, just the same."

He stepped upon the running board, put his arm around her shoulder and drew her head over to him. "Weep on the breast of a friend," he urged. "Probably it's a privilege you've never enjoyed before."

While she sobbed against him he cautiously unbuckled the shoulder holster with the pistol in it, slipped it down under the tail of his coat and tossed it across the road into the grass.

CHAPTER IV

While Fate was busy staging a long-drawn tragedy in Eden Valley, Forlorn Valley had not been overlooked by the land-hungry. By 1880 practically every acre had been homesteaded; the district developed into a dry farming section and later into "mixed" farming.

Gold Run was the county seat, and in the heart of Forlorn Valley a settlement known as Valley Center had gradually developed into a village of about five hundred inhabitants. The entire valley was stagnant and drab until a large hydroelectric company erected its steel pyramids across the valley. Thereupon an enterprising farmer had a deep well drilled on his ranch and developed a surprising flow of water which rose almost to the surface; with a cheap centrifugal pump driven by a ten-horse power electric motor he was enabled to irrigate his quarter-section farm, seemingly without appreciable effect on the water level.

Almost at once Forlorn Valley was the victim of a boom. Gradually the brown lands became checkerboarded with vivid green patches, as the planting of alfalfa developed. Orchards were planted; the raising of hogs and cattle for beef and dairying increased; an adventurer from nowhere appeared and laid out a subdivision of the "thriving city" of Valley Center.

A former Middle West bank clerk, Silas Babson, who had inherited an Iowa farm from his parents and sold it for seventy-five thousand dollars, came to Valley Center and started a state bank. The Bank of Valley Center was successful from the start.

Babson was a son of the soil; thrifty, shrewd, rapacious, competent. From banking he reached out and interested himself in such local enterprises as creameries, a lumber yard, the largest local garage with the agency for a popular cheap automobile and pumps; he sold insurance of all kinds.

Only once had Babson lost his perspective on values and that was during the World war, and for this it would seem he was not to be blamed, since all his fellow countrymen lost theirs simultaneously. The rapid advance in the price of farm commodities had brought the usual boom of prosperity to Forlorn Valley. The bank, sharing in the general and unusual prosperity, presently had a glut of money on deposit and, since banks exist by loaning the funds deposited with them, Babson, with so much money on hand, and faced with the problem of making that money pay dividends, let down his guard, so to speak, and loaned money on farm mortgages.

The post-war deflation period arrived and the values of farms and farm products dropped almost overnight below the pre-war marks. As he contemplated the bank's unsecured notes and frozen assets in the shape of mortgages on farms for 80 per cent of their present value and that value an exceedingly doubtful one, Babson had a very clear vision of hard times in the immediate offing.

If he foreclosed his mortgages he would have the farms on his hands—likewise their taxes and the loss of interest.

For the succeeding four years Mr. Babson's commercial progress was tinctured with caution. Then the pendulum commenced to swing the other way very slowly, and one day a brilliant thought leaped into his harried brain.

He decided to transfer his financial burdens to the capable hands of the rightful receiver of all gold bricks, to wit, the government. From the joint land stock banks established by the government to aid the stricken farmers and stock raisers he would induce his debtors to borrow on mortgage, at 5½ per cent, sufficient funds to pay off the existing mortgages at 8 per cent held by the Bank of Valley Center. In order to sweeten the deal Mr. Babson even considered waiving the accumulated and unpaid interest for a couple of years. All he wanted back was the principal of his foolish loans, for with that in his vaults he knew his bank would be quite safe.

Promptly he bulldozed a farmer into making application for such a loan, and with commendable celerity a government farm appraiser came up from San Francisco to inspect the proffered collateral. It required something less than thirty seconds for this individual to make his appraisal and decision.

"The government," he said, "will not consider loaning money on California farms which are listed as dry-farming lands."

"But these lands are irrigated," Mr. Babson reminded him.

"Yes, so I observe, but from deep wells. But as more and more wells are bored and the farming in this valley tends more and more toward intensive cropping, thus requiring more and more water for irrigation, the water levels will recede and the cost of pumping the water to the surface will increase proportionately with the lift until a point will be reached where the water will be tinctured with red ink. Hence, such lands as these are listed as dry-farming lands and constitute a loan risk the government is unwilling to assume. It will loan only on lands that are surface irrigated and with an assured and continuous source of water supply."

"So I've loaned money on dry farms because I was jackass enough to consider them irrigated farms," Babson almost moaned.

He made a survey of the water situation and discovered to his horror that the water levels were indeed receding.

"Creeping paralysis! That's what it is," he soliloquized. "And the Bank of Valley Center is the richest patient and will have to pay the heaviest bill for medical attention."

But the old ability to scheme his way out of a tight hole did not desert him. He reduced his situation to its lowest common divisor. If surface irrigation from a never-failing and ample source of water supply, could be brought to the lands of Forlorn Valley, then Forlorn Valley lands would be classed by the government as irrigated lands, whose value would immediately return to the old wartime figure. And the federal farm loan banks would then have no hesitancy in loaning up to 60 per cent of the appraised value.

Therefore, the thing to do was to secure surface irrigation for Forlorn Valley.

"Eden Valley creek," Babson cried aloud. "A dam in that gorge in the lower end of Eden Valley, kept perennially at a high level by the flood waters of Eden Valley creek and led through a tunnel or a canal cut through the low hills on the northern rim and down into Forlorn Valley, will do the trick."

The next problem was that of acquiring the water, but this Babson did not regard as a difficult one. He had but to acquire the dam site from young Nathan Tichenor, sole owner of the Bar H Land and Cattle company. The land which would be inundated by the lake which would be formed when the dam should be built was next to worthless; Babson decided the Bar H Land and Cattle company would be delighted to get rid of it at a price not exceeding ten dollars an acre, although as grazing land it was not worth that. There were hydro electric possibilities inherent in the enterprise that would be worth millions alone. He must approach this delicate matter cautiously.

Tichenor had been an absentee landlord ever since leasing the Bar H ranch to Rance Kershaw. That argued he would scarcely be interested in returning to Eden Valley again and engaging in the cattle business.

Rance Kershaw was a financial wreck and could not possibly continue his lease of the Bar H, and it would be several years, doubtless, before a new tenant could be found for it. Yes, Nate Tichenor would sell the Bar H at a fair price—exorbitant, considering the present status of the cattle industry—rather than hang on to a frozen asset and pay taxes on it.

Mr. Babson decided instantly to buy the Bar H, if he had to pawn his wife's piano to aid in raising the money for the enterprise. With the title to the ranch vested in him—no, a dummy, for Babson must not appear in the deal—it would be a simple matter to sell the dam and lake sites to the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district for a cash consideration that would leave him the remainder of the ranch without cost!

He considered the Kershaw ranch and decided he would not bother to acquire that, even if he had the money to buy it cheap. It was worth not a penny less than a million dollars, but the Savings Bank of San Francisco held a two hundred and fifty thousand dollar first mortgage on it, the mortgage was due, Rance Kershaw (Babson knew) could not meet it, Babson doubted if he could refund it in these trying times, and hence, it would be foreclosed. Well, he might pick it up for the amount of the mortgage at the sheriff's sale. He did not require the Kershaw ranch for the sake of its water rights, but in order to control the water it was an absolute necessity for him to acquire the Bar H. Once the water had flowed down through the Kershaw ranch the Kershaws had no further interest in it; but it had to be impounded on the Bar H before it escaped off into the bad lands to the east and was lost.

Ice Skating Possible on Small Lake in Africa, Ten Miles From Equator

There's a little lake in Africa, ten miles south of the equator, which a representative of the American Museum of Natural History always thinks of as "the Skating Pond" because, strange as it may seem, men have actually skated upon its frozen surface.

In his search for African birds to add to the museum's collections he climbed Mount Kenya on the slopes of which the "Skating Pond" lies.

At the end of our third day's climb, the scientist writes in Natural History Magazine of the American Museum of Natural History, our camp was a miserable one. Dead tree trunks were the only fuel, and they were as full of water as sponges. Our cook worked an hour and a half, and used two gallons of kerosene to get a fire started. The temperature that night dropped to 42.5 degrees.

The next morning we climbed about 1,000 feet up a steep slope of earth and small boulders known as the Scree. The word is from the Icelandic—an appropriate derivation, it seems to me. Finally we reached the second shelter hut close to the "Skating Pond" at the margin of the Lewis glacier. Inside lay ice axes and ropes, suggestive of the repeated attempts to scale the highest peak, Batian, which had only once been conquered. The Lewis glacier, its rounding surface now separating us from the base of the two peaks, Batian and Nelion, is the largest ice field on Kenya, and is two miles long. We were able to look across the dark base of the peaks, and sometimes could make out the snow-filled couloir that had served as a way upward, but nothing more. Since nine that morning the rest had been completely hidden in fog. The temperature at one o'clock was 41 degrees. Water boiled at 183.8 degrees.

MEMORY'S PART IN THE RECORDS OF EVERYDAY LIFE

Unpleasant things may be pleasantly remembered and, in a sense, gloried in. Among these are hardships overcome, dangers survived and sacrifices that bear fruit. So it was held by Aeneas, who assured his comrades that in days to come they would rejoice to recall their trials and tribulations. One can readily enough understand this. It is only the treasons that it is unpleasant to recall. There can be nothing painful in the recollection of difficulties mastered. An old philosopher was convinced that the gods rejoiced to see a good man in difficulties, for that involved a conflict in which it is possible for a strong character to triumph. What is pleasant to remember is loyalty to truth and right. Browning makes this very clear in one of his poems. The thing that stings is the recollection of failure and cowardice, falseness and pettiness. Shakespeare's counsel "to thine own self be true" cannot be improved on. A man's future, the point from which he looks back on his journey through life, is determined by what he does and thinks every day. If he would have happy recollections, he can have them, but only by filling his life with things which he would rejoice and be proud to remember. Memory may be one of life's blessings or one of its greatest curses. To return to the gloomy phase of the subject, Lady Macbeth suffered from and because of things "rooted in the memory," which is a very solemn thought. If evil is rooted in the memory it is very difficult to get rid of.—Indianapolis News.

Whose Fault?

The Boy or Girl Who Refuses to Eat

"What have I ever done to deserve a child who refuses to eat, and is just skin and bones?" The mother who asks that question might be surprised to learn that she alone is to blame. She knows a lack of appetite is the sign of a clogged system, but does the wrong thing to remedy the condition. A violent cathartic that upsets the stomach pulls down a child like a spell of sickness. It often forms the laxative habit. A more sensible way of regulating children is explained in the column to the right:

It's a lucky girl whose mother knows how to regulate her children's bowels without some strong, evil-tasting cathartic that upsets the system and ruins their appetite! Whenever sluggishness coats the little tongue, makes the whites of the eyes a bilious yellow, or a child is headachy and fretful, just try pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fruity laxative is so agreeable to take, so natural in action! Get real California Syrup of Figs at any drug store. The bottle should say 'California'.
